Mistakes Happen: Apologies Help Fix Them

You've made a mistake, but it's not the end of the world. When ADHD causes you to mess up, you have the ability to make things right again.

Two Conditions, One Struggle: Teaching Students with ADHD and Dyslexia

When a student has both ADHD and dyslexia, the usual teaching techniques may not be enough. An educational expert tells us about working with students who

cope with both conditions in the classroom.

Looking for more information about apps and how technology could be helpful for your child—and when too much is too much?

Our Ask the Expert webinar looks at how children and young people use technology and what that means when they also have ADHD. While there are many helpful apps for children and families, sometimes choices can be overwhelming when deciding how best to use technology at home.

Join us to:

- Understand the potential of screen-based technologies for ADHD
- Recognize the risks of too much screen time for kids and adults with ADHD
- Choose and use technology to help kids and adults with ADHD

Randy Kulman, PhD, is the founder and president of LearningWorks for Kids, an educational technology company that specializes in using video games to teach executive-functioning and academic skills. For the past 30 years, Dr. Kulman has also been the clinical director and president of South County Child and Family Consultants, a private practice that specializes in the assessment of children with learning disorders and attention difficulties.
