Find New Ways to Celebrate Your Teen’s Graduation

Making it to the finish line when coping with ADHD in high school is an achievement still worth celebrating during a time of social distancing.

Staying Connected Online

For adults with ADHD, their symptoms may compound feelings of loneliness, especially when social distancing. Online tools can help you connect with friends and family.

Embrace Learning
Opportunity
If you’re a parent accustomed to sending your kids off in the mornings the notion of homeschooling may raise the hairs on the back of your neck. You didn’t sign up for this!

Ask the Expert Highlight
On Their Own: Helping College Students with ADHD
Featuring Theresa Maitland, PhD
Watch Now

High school is coming to an end. Many graduates are preparing for college, either on campus or online. Are you and your high school senior wondering what academic resources there are to support her during her first college semester?

Dr. Theresa Maitland has tips to better prepare for the transition between high school and college.
Read these and other articles in the ADHD in the News weekly digest.

ADHD Conference Toolbox: Supporting Your Child’s Education

To support parents and educators, CHADD has created a special offer of selected recordings from the Annual International Conference on ADHD. Learn more at the buttons below.

Toolbox for Parents

Toolbox for Educators

Applications are now accepted for the Nicholas Costa Undergraduate Scholarship. Designed to encourage students with ADHD to pursue their passions and fulfill their educational objectives, the scholarship represents an investment in our nation’s future leaders.

Learn More & Apply