

The impact of COVID-19 on the Symptoms of Children Diagnosed with Combined-type ADHD. We invite you to participate in this important effort!

Research Team: A. Idriss, S. Welch, E. Buckley, H. Seigel, J. Spaan, T. Zilbershtein, A. Rinard, L. Finnegan, Ph. D.,

We invite you to participate in a research study entitled: The impact of COVID-19 on the Symptoms of Children Diagnosed with Combined-type ADHD. This study will examine the potential effects COVID-19 may have had on hyperactivity, impulsivity, and inattention levels of children diagnosed with combined type Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder. We can then better understand and improve treatments/therapy when working with children diagnosed with combined-type ADHD.

Participants are required to be a parent/legal guardian to a child diagnosed with combined type ADHD of ages 6-12 years old.

If you agree to participate in this project, please answer the questions on the survey linked below as best you can. It should take approximately 10 minutes to complete. After submitting the survey your response will be sent directly to the investigators of this research study.

So, if you're willing to participate in the anonymous survey please click this link to access it.

Your participation in this research project is completely voluntary. There are no known risks to participation beyond those encountered in everyday life. Your responses will remain confidential and anonymous. Data from this research will be kept in a double password protected file (computer & data base) and reported only as a collective combined total. Your name will never appear on any survey or research instruments. No one other than the researchers will know your individual answers to this questionnaire. Your participation in this study, and any identifiable personal information you provide, will be kept confidential to every extent possible, and will be destroyed 3 years after the data collection is completed.

If you have any questions about this project, feel free to contact Lisa Finnegan at Lfinnegan@fau.edu.

Thank you for your help in this important effort!